

90 Days of Roman Inebriation

It started simply as we were moving to Italy, or something. Immigration problems and a shifting idea of a sabbatical led to wandering Europe, staying within the feared Schengen Zone, we became vagabonds without a home. The weather turned from the stroke inducing Roman heat into a blasting cold from the North Sea over a single week in Southern Spain. Eight months we lived out of a suitcase as it became wine, reading, trains and tramps. Our Visa rejected, we became illegals running through the border-less regions of Europe. 13 countries and 64 cities later we staggered home to California. We learned the hard way.
