

The Church of Christ: Its Foundation and Constitution (Classic Reprint)

Excerpt from The Church of Christ: Its Foundation and Constitution When I learned that the Catholic Bishops of Ireland had decided, with the approval of the Senate, to establish a Professorship of Theology in the National University, and had nominated me to the position, I thought at first that we should begin these lectures by defining the nature and scope of theological studies, their place in a University, and their bearing upon the intellectual attitude and practical conduct of educated Catholics, lay, not less than clerical. But I reflected that this work has been already done - done, too, with a grace and thoroughness which render any other attempt not merely unnecessary, but in this place at least, well-nigh presumptuous.
