

Saving MacArthur - Book 7 - Its getting better!: How the Philippines were relieved - in 1942!

Here is book no. 7 in a series telling the story of how the Philippines were relieved - in 1942! We are now in the Summer of 1942, the Japanese have tried several times to take the important Australian base of Port Moresby, New Guinea, but have been turned back. They have, However, not given up. Most of Sumatra and Java are in Japanese hands and new attempts are made to land forces in the Malayan Barrier, east of Bali. They are still ashore on Mindanao and threatening the Australian-garrisoned base in Sorong, Papua New Guinea. The Americans have established air and naval bases on Palawan, bordering the South China Sea. MacArthur has decided on what his future strategy shall be and is well on his way to fulfilling it. Its all in the book.
